Short Term Rentals...

Short term rentals (renting for less than 30 days) are permitted by right in some zones, permitted by Conditional Use in some zones, and prohibited in the remaining zones. This issue is becoming more challenging: (1) Apartments are being "repackaged" and sold as condominiums and these condominiums are being purchased for use as short term rentals, (2) Condominium owners who use their condos as a second home are renting them out as short term rentals; this may run afoul of the condominium's owners association's covenants, (3) Rental property owners in single family residential zones ignore city ordinances prohibiting such, and (4) Rental property owners where short term rentals are permitted as a conditional use do not apply to the city's Planning Commission for approval to do so. At this time, there are approximately 15 short term rentals that have been approved by the Planning Commission/Council to operate lawfully. A slew of short term applicants will be heard by the Planning Commission in December. Read the city's general guidelines for short term rentals

City property now available for lease or purchase...

City property available for lease or purchase... See the map (Bmail, Nov. 8) This month the city published Request for Proposals (RFP) for either sale or lease of the properties, and any agreements would be influenced by price, benefit to the city and community in general, and proposed use. For instance, the RFPs noted a neighborhood grocery store could be a factor in price. Proposals, which must be accompanied by a refundable $5,000 certified check, are due to the city by 10 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 30, and any agreements would require City Council approval. Among the sites: 18 narrow parcels south of Division Street on Caillavet, a corner parcel at Caillavet and Division, and further east on Division, a large parcel near Oak Street that stretches from Division Street to the CSX railway and was once the site of the "city barn." Two recreational sites, O'Reilly and Danella parks, also are included in the RFPs.

Mississippi Power begins Neighborhood Efficiency Program...

Mississippi Power has begun a Neighborhood Efficiency Program in selected parts of the city. The program assists low income communities by: (1) educating the customer on energy usage through an in-home energy audit; (2) installing energy efficient measures at no cost to the customer and; (3) reducing the customer's energy bill by making homes more efficient. The customer will receive a box of 6 LED bulbs. Mississippi Power will also pay for a HVAC tune-up, attic insulation, or duct sealing depending on which will benefit the customer the most.
